

Engineers

Design it once, get what you designed.

Consulting Engineers design and specify products to perform very specific functions. Working with one manufacturer or another may result in specifications around products, not solutions. Other times, components are specified, without the benefit of careful integration with other parts of the system. To make matters worse, many manufacturers offer a one size fits all approach, attempting to keep prices low at the expense of ease of installation, serviceability, reliability, and efficiency.

FPS products exist for only one reason; solve real problems in the real world. Every FPS product uses best in class components from the best manufacturer of each component. These parts are combined into completely integrated and pre-engineered subsystems, true solutions to the requirements of the application. By specifying an FPS solution, design time can be minimized, while quality, reliability and efficiency are maximized and repeatable.
