MY STORY

I thought I had more time....

It's hard to know what to do before it's time. We always think we have so much more "time."

When my mom suffered from a stroke years ago, I wasn't prepared for what would follow. I thought we had more time. Fast forward (time frame), my mom's health suddenly began to decline from a different diagnosis. In just two months, I found myself scrambling again and unprepared like years ago when she suffered the stroke. As nights grew long and questions to simple things became hard, I wished we spoke about her financial affairs so I could have been better informed.
