HOST TERMINALS

Host first began stevedoring services in Virginia in 1925.

After taking a hiatus for a few decades, we re-entered the terminal space in 1999 at the request of a customer who wanted to invest their capital, but needed a REAL solution to operate a marine terminal.

Since then, we've taken steps to expand our geographic and service scope, to build teams that can take on unique challenges in diverse environments, and to add value while providing REAL solutions for our customers.

REAL Solutions

The waterfront is a challenging workplace, where heavy manufacturing actually floats and time truly equals money. Our customers are well aware of these unique dynamics, and they trust Host to put our hard-earned experience to work to meet shared goals.

Adding Value

Whether it requires our people or alternate labor, dedicated assets or shared space, our equipment or someone else's, our investment or yours, we're committed to providing the REAL solutions you need.

Your goals are our goals.

Terminal Operations & Stevedoring

Often operating terminals for third parties, we're trusted with the safe care and custody of over 100 million-dollars-worth of assets. As stevedores, Host handles breakbulk, heavy lift, project cargoes, and thousands of container moves every year. Whether it's a one-off, 300-ton generator, a $100 million dollar yacht, or a thousand bags of cement, we've done it before, and we're prepared to do it again. Annually, we handle approximately 1,200 vessels, 8 million barrels of liquid bulk, 20 million tons of bulk and breakbulk, and thousands of container moves.

Terminal Operations

Host's reputation for safety and professionalism is well-known throughout the industry.

We continuously collect data to evaluate metrics and trends. Operating with a LEAN culture, we perform ongoing maintenance and continuous process improvements to increase performance, safety, and efficiency. Our continual process improvements benefit the entire operation. Information on terms and conditions may be found here.
