What is Melon?

Brought to you by the team behind Streamlabs, Melon empowers creators to live-stream with ease.

Our Story

After the global health crisis forced many companies to work remotely in 2020, we realized there was a strong need for a simple yet powerful live streaming tool for creators to easily connect with their audiences.

While there are existing live streaming solutions out there, the vast majority are built for (and priced for) creators with existing professional hardware setups. We built Melon to enable creators to go live with ease.

Melon is a powerful and intuitive web-based live streaming studio that allows creators anywhere to use the tools they already have to create content, to connect with others, and to build communities.

Our Team

Melon was designed with love by a small team of engineers and designers working remotely during the global health crisis.

Our team also works on Streamlabs, a leading provider of live streaming tools and part of the Logitech family.

Our mission is to empower creators to do more.
