Q Type your question or keyword

From the manufacturer

Not sure what size CLUG you need? We can help you with that.

Measure your Tire

Indicated size ranges are based on your Actual physical tire width. It's best to go old fashion, get your ruler out and measure the width of your tire.

Finally, select the appropriate Clug size to give your bike the perfect hug.

Size: Roadie

This size is designed to fit Road Bike Tires – small and lean.

If your tire is between 23 and 32mm (1" to 1.25") then this is the size for you!

Size: Hybrid

This size is designed to fit Hybrid Tires – comfortable and wide but not too knobby.

If your tire is between 33 and 43mm (1.3" to 1.7") then this is the size for you!

Size: MTB

This size is designed to fit Mountain Bike Tires – knobby and ready to shred trails.

If your tire is between 1.75" and 2.25" (44mm to 57mm) then this is the size for you!

Installation: It's almost too easy to install

Step 1: Do you have the right Clug?

If you haven't already, you'll need to check that the Clug you got is the right size for your tire.

As a handy guide, we also put the maximum and minimum sizes for each Clug right on the side of the box. Just hold it up to your tire and check to see that it is within the range.

Note: Clug is a tiny bike rack that works with your floor to store your bike. Clug can't Hang your bike, it doesn't work that way and you might hurt your back trying. We wouldn't want that.

Step 2: Location and Alignment

Time to figure out where your Clug is going. Once you've found your section of the wall, you can use the alignment guide on the box to get your hole spacing marked precisely.

Holding your bike in the position you want it (you can get a friend to help here), you'll want to align the position of your Clug with the centre of your wheel, where the tire touches the wall.

Step 3: Drills, Holes, and Anchors

You'll need to drill some holes if you are putting Clug on anything other than wood surface (or a stud in the wall). To drill, just stick your template lightly to the wall and drill right through the guide.

If you drilled holes, insert the anchors from your box into the holes to give you something to screw into.

Step 4: Screws, Clip, and Grip

Separate the Clipper from the Gripper and screw the Clipper into the wall.

You'll be able to make small adjustments before you tighten the screws fully, to make sure that your Clug is level.

Snap the Gripper in to cover the screw heads, and you're ready to Clug!

★★★★☆ Aesthetics are nice, function is just ok

Reviewed in the United States on July 6, 2017

Style: Roadie (23-32mm) | Color: White/Black | Verified Purchase

When we moved to a new home I wanted to find a good solution for our bicycles in the garage, so I picked one of these up to give it a try.

It works fine in general, but I have a few minor issues that would cause me to not buy any others:

*If you bump into the bike it is likely to fall from the mount

*you really need to keep your tires well inflated to avoid the bike falling on its own. Not a problem with bikes that are used often enough, but I have at least one that gets little use and this causes an issue.

Note that I "fixed" these issues slightly by adding some velcro behind the strap around the wheel. This solution is a little bit of a pain and makes using the mount far less convenient than it could be.

Given the cost of the CLUG, I will likely be using another solution, such as cheaper screw-in rubber coated hooks instead.

★★★★★ GREAT hack for property renters

Reviewed in the United States on November 15, 2018

Style: Hybrid (33-43mm) | Color: White/Black | Verified Purchase

My roommate and I needed a way to efficiently store our multiple bikes without taking up a lot of space in our apartment or putting anchor holes in the wall. I got 3 of these CLUGs and installed each to a section of painted baseboard trim. I then used CommandStrips to adhere the trim to the wall (very solid hold against sheering forces). When its time to move, the CommandStrips will pull free without damaging the paint and I can take my snazzy little racks to their new home.

With a small guard at the back-tire position to avoid marring the base of the wall, the bikes hang perfectly, neatly, and I didn't have to endanger my damage deposit.

The CLUGs also work as advertised. I've had one bike fall over the last 6 months because I had a leak in the front tire and it went flat. Keep your tires inflated (at least above 15 psi I reckon), and you'll be fine.

★★★☆☆ Does not fit tire sizes that it says it does

Reviewed in the United States on November 21, 2018

Style: Roadie (23-32mm) | Color: White/Orange | Verified Purchase

I've purchased the small and medium size Clugs for differing tire sizes, and had fitment issues with both products. The Clug says it can fit a range of tire sizes in its description. However, if your tires are on the smaller size of the spectrum for your particular Small/Medium/Large Clug, I can virtually guarantee it will not fit. It will slide in, and then slide right back out without being held in place like the product is supposed to do. So just keep that in mind before you buy. If your bike is more in the middle or upper range of the dimensions, then this should work fine.

Side note - The first Clug I purchased was missing the wall anchor and had to be exchanged. Wasn't a big ideal but still bothersome to buy a new product that doesn't include everything it's supposed to come with.

★★★★★ Great simple minimalist option

Reviewed in the United States on December 27, 2020

Style: Mtb XL (58-69mm) | Color: White/Black | Verified Purchase

I bought the XL clug for my full suspension mountain bike with a 2.5" maxxis DHF up front.

I have another clug for my road bike that fits very snugly, so I was a bit wary when the big knobby tire slid in so easily without much resistance. I think as the clug size gets larger, the plastic feels more flexible and doesn't give you the same satisfying "thunk" when you put the tire in.

My fear was unwarranted. The tire is secure and I think as long as the pressure stays above 10psi, it will stay put.

I may add a velcro or cage strap under the clug as a backup. Especially when storing for multiple weeks in the off-season, a strap around the tire would add insurance if the tire deflates over time.

Pro tip: the larger clugs are big enough to stick command strips to the back. They only deal with about 5lb force max. so you can install these in an apartment without drilling holes. The smaller clugs will to be

★☆☆☆☆ Dissappointed

Reviewed in the United States on December 31, 2019

Style: Roadie (23-32mm) | Color: Black/Black | Verified Purchase

I bought the Hornit to keep my bike upright (I'm clipping the front tire on it while both tires on the ground, horizontally) in my condo and unfortunately it was a disappointing purchase.

For starters, there is no room for error when drilling holes for this thing. I was about a millimeter off on one of the screws and had to drill a larger hole in order to get the screw to line up with it. And the size of the hole you need to drill is much bigger than I had anticipated...Also, one of the screws I received was defective so thankfully I had one laying around that I could use.

My bike tire is 32mm so I purchased the smallest Hornit after reading a review that said it would be better to have it snug than too loose. With my tire right on the edge of the small one and the next size up, I just don't think it's fully compatible with my bike. It takes some force to get it to clip in and once it's clipped, if I tip my bike over a few inches, it falls right over. Maybe the next size up would be better but I'm concerned that one would be too loose.

★★★★★ Wonderfully awesome. Buy this.

Reviewed in the United States on April 7, 2016

Style: Roadie (23-32mm) | Color: White/Black | Verified Purchase

Purchased this as a minimalist solution to bike storage in a very small bedroom (pics attached). Installation is wonderfully simple - I used the included template to mark spots to drill to put small holes for the drywall anchors. Tap in the drywall anchors with a hammer. Then take a phillips head screwdriver to put the screws into those. It holds the bike as designed. The tires shown in pics are 25mm Continental Gatorskin tires but I feel that 23 or 28 would also fit fine in this size of CLUG.

It seems to hold securely enough, but my only critique/concern during installation is that the drywall anchors felt like they were going to bend or break when tapping them in, I wish they were a bit more substantial/sturdy so that the apparatus felt more secure in drywall. I would recommend you put this into a stud where possible thus bypassing the need for the plastic anchors entirely, but that wasn't an option for me. If it rips/falls out in the future, I will just have to grab a couple new drywall anchors and move it over an inch left or right in the same wall.

In short, buy this.

★★★★☆ Excellent product, but go down a size if you are at the low end of the range

Reviewed in the United Kingdom on July 15, 2020

Style: Mtb Xl (58-69mm) | Color: White/Black | Verified Purchase

This is a great product, without doubt. My only criticism is the tyre size range recommendation.

We have tyres that are 2.35" so i bought the MTB XL as they start from 2.3", however, this doesn't sit snug and hold the bike wheel vertically. You can balance it precariously but the slightest nudge will knock the bike out resulting in a loud crash! (first hand experience). That said, if you put teh bike up and then angle the front wheel to one side it holds it better.

We also bought some mtb size ones and the 2.362 fits really snug and secure so I would recommend going for a smaller size if you are right at the low end of the size range.

We also have two bikes with 1.95" wheels which is at the low end of the mtb size range (starting at 1.75"), and these again need to be angled to feel secured. If I hadn't already fitted them all, I might try to exchange them for the hybrid size, but I figure we'll get bikes with bigger tyres in the future so going to make do.

★★★★☆ Amazing idea. Just too small for mtb despite buying the right size

Reviewed in the United Kingdom on July 18, 2018

Style: MTB (44-57mm) | Color: White/Black | Verified Purchase

I saw these on youtube and thought they where ingenious... to be fair I still think that but I did know to be careful to check the size as there are ones for different tyres. This one is for upto 2.6 I believe and my tyres are 29 x 2.1. They barley fit. I mean a massive effort to click it in. Please don't be put off by this as this is still a really cool good quility product but just be warned if you own a mtb or have a larger thick wheel you will struggle.

★★★★☆ A bit loose for me unfortunately....

Reviewed in the United Kingdom on July 3, 2020

Style: Xxl Plus (70-81mm) | Color: White/Orange | Verified Purchase

I've only given it 3 stars as I ride 2.85 tyres but in my opinion the appropriate sized clug is a tad to big. I therefore used an old ratchet strap around the whole thing just for extra security. My tire is properly inflated so it's not because I'm riding low pressures either. Packaging is great, comes with all the necessary bits and the cardboard box with the drill points is a neat touch. I like it but in hindsight the size down would probably have been the better option. At £17 though it's not something I'd buy another to replace it with. My tyre size was only just in to the largest size but it clearly was hence my purchase. The strap, although not as aesthetically pleasing, does the job so if you found yourself in the same sort of situation it's not useless. It's not until it's on the wall either that you can see how the bike 'pulls' on the clug. By the time you've installed you've used the screws and plugs so sending back wouldn't probably be an option.

Got this a week or so ago. Easy to put up.

I took note of a few of rhe comments that if the tyre deflates if tou don't use your bike for a while, so when I attached it to the wall I put a velcro strip behind it and made sure the screws went through that as well. I tested it by letting the tyre down whilst attached to the clug and it stayed firmly in place.

I like the minimalist look of the clug on the wall as it is in my conservatory, which occasionally gets used when friends come round & if needed the bike can be relegated elsewhere for a while.

Would buy again.

★★★★☆ Simple and neat product

Reviewed in the United Kingdom on April 3, 2021

Style: MTB (44-57mm) | Color: White/Black | Verified Purchase

I've been looking at these for ages and finally bought 3 of them, 2 hybrid and 1 Mtb. The sizes at the low end of the mtb and max on the hybrid is only 1mm different so I have my sons bike is loose in the mtb clug but it still holds. If anything it's super easy for him but I am concerned it will fall out and knock the other bikes.

My wheel was the max in the hybrid and is a tight fit so over time I am worried this may damage the plastic but I will see.

The downside to these products are the screws that come with them, I had 1 snap as I was nearly done. I was unable to get it out so had to work around it! For the hybrid clugs I swapped out 2 of the screws due to poor quality.

Pros, they are small and easy to install if you have no issues with the screws, they are quick to use and easy to clean.
