Anthony Bourdain was a legend, if you watched him, you wanted more.

You wanted to travel like he traveled, eat like he ate and live the experiences he lived. ANML and our sister company Roads & Kingdoms brought you into Bourdain's world, allowing fans to take a deeper dive after each episode.

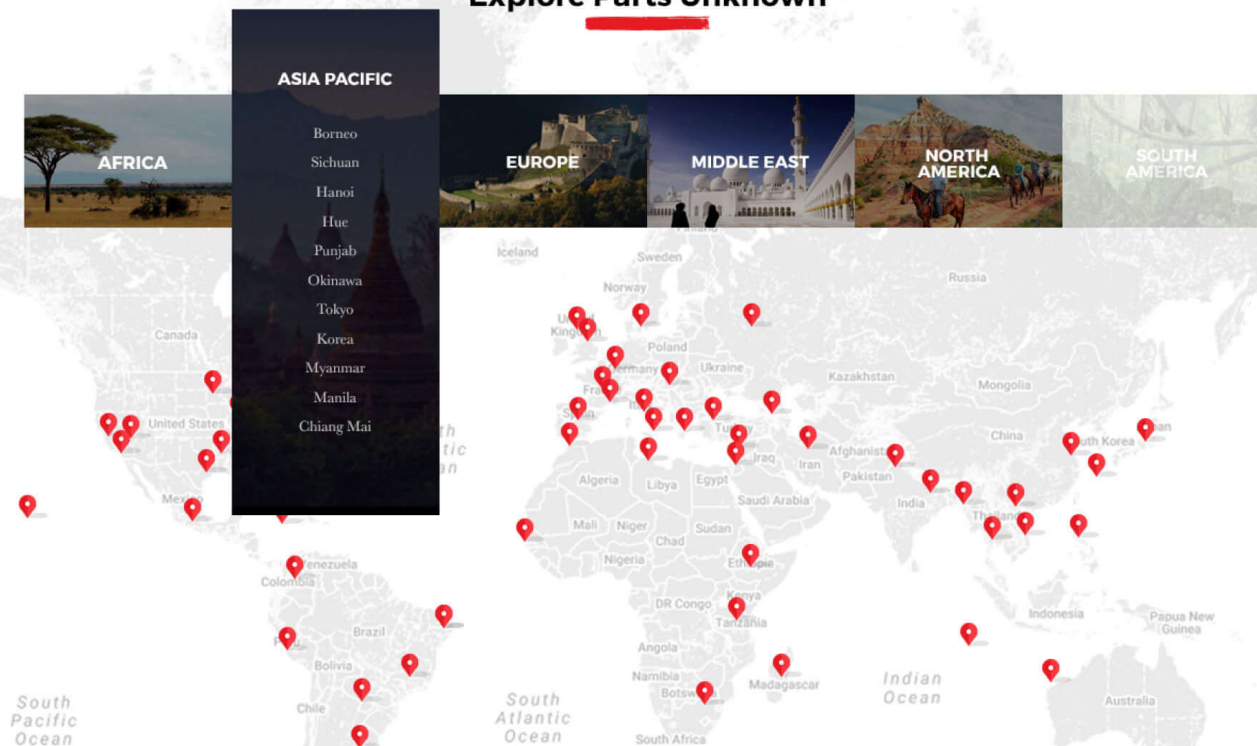

Using a Master content template, unique page types are created on the fly by the editing team. Pulling from a component library, editors are able to publish a variety of content types within each story. Video throughout the site brings stories and sections to life. While micro-interactions enhance the user experience.

There are many ways to make tasty fried chicken, and I like them all, but I'm particularly enamored of the Korean way, which requires some planning ahead but is extremely satisfying. The blanching and freezing technique was lifted from Danny Bowien at Mission Chinese, who does this with his chicken wings. The freezing step makes this dish into a two-day affair, and you'll need to clear some room in your freezer, but it's essential for extra-crisp results.

Ingredients:
(Serves 6 to 8)

FOR THE MARINADE

- 1 cup roasted chili oil
- ½ cup kosher salt
- 1 tablespoon medium-fine gochugaru (ground Korean red pepper)

FOR THE CHICKEN

- 4 pounds chicken legs, separated into thighs and drumsticks
- About 4 quarts peanut or soy oil, for frying
- 1 cup potato starch or tapioca starch

FOR THE SAUCE

- 1 cup gochujang (fermented Korean pepper paste)
- 8 garlic cloves
- ½ cup pure maple syrup
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 2 teaspoons fish sauce
