

What Are Cannabis Concentrates?

Cannabis concentrates are cannabis products that are more potent and last longer. In fact, they can be two to three times more potent than a dry cannabis product.

These concentrates are more powerful because they're a more concentrated form of cannabis. However, they're created through a scientific process called extraction.

The extract will strip away all of the extra plant material, and it only keeps the cannabis compounds like CBD, CBG, and THC. These are all the compounds that give people the effects typically attributed to marijuana.

There are a few different ways to make extracted products, and there are actually different types of concentrates as well. The most popular concentrates are packaged into vape cartridges, even disposable vapes.

They're a great choice because they're discreet, easy to use, powerful, and affordable. The two most common types of concentrates are distillate and live resin. If you go to a dispensary near you, then they'll likely carry both of these options.

What Is Cannabis Distillate?

Cannabis distillate is a type of cannabis concentrate that is highly refined. It's made out of cannabinoid oil, and a compound like THC will be isolated.

The distillate is highly potent and can be used for all kinds of products or experiences. They are made up of 100% cannabinoid content, and they could be pure THC.

To make this, the cured cannabis will have its oil extracted. People will use heat to separate THC or CBD from the plant material to create this distillate.

In general, the distillate will look clear. It doesn't really have a flavor or smell, which makes it a good base for edibles and disposable vape cartridges.

Because of the potent base, it can be used as it is or be used to create cannabis products with other flavors.

For example, a manufacturer might add in some other terpenes to give a flavor to it. Other manufacturers might add some other cannabinoids to produce a certain effect from the distillate.

You can use distillates to add to topicals or edibles. You can also smoke, vape, or dab it. Some people even use these distillates sublingually.
