Question: What is the diameter of the bar?

Answer: The diameter is one inch. It is very sturdy, but with a smaller diameter than the standard grab bar. We wanted it to almost disappear against the charcoal tile in our shower.

★★★★☆ Once installed, awesome

Vine Customer Review of Free Product \(What's this?\)

OK, this is a nice bar at a great price.

I got it because I saw "16 inch" in the description and I thought: "cool, I'll install it horizontally between studs". Wrong.

15.75 inches is the absolute outer edge of the escutcheon. At the post metal - where you actually screw it to something, it's approx 14.5" center to center.

This is a grab bar, so no way I'm installing this with drywall anchors, even on one side - that's a terrible idea folks. Unless you think you'll never have anyone of any size actually use this to pull themselves up in some fashion, drywall by itself will never last as an anchor point.

So, I installed this vertically with both sides in the same stud. I had wanted to install it horizontally, until I realized it would not reach studs on both side.

Besides that, this is great! It's attractive and super strong once installed. I recommend.

We like the size and shape of the Anti-Slip Bar, 16inch (15.75inch) Bathroom Safety Grab Bar Handgrip Grab Wall Mounted Bar Rail Shower Grab Bar Safety Support Rail Straight Handrails for Shower Handle for Bathtub. The bar is a comfortable size, and has a nice coating. I wouldn't necessarily trust the cheap wall anchors that are provided, unless you are using this just for show. I am not sure about the weight rating on the bar, but if mounted properly, would provide support for someone who needed a grip bar.
