- Orthopaedic insoles adopt double-density structure, which has better flexibility.
- Unique cushioning foam is used for the top and bottom layers, with a flexible arch supporting insole sandwiched between, which can provide better flexibility, comfort and stability for sports and active lifestyles.
- A flexible arch support is used to better fit the middle and low arches, and the contour of the embedded arch support is suitable for the support of the inner and outer arches that require additional support.
- The semi-flexible support provides an appropriate balance between support and comfort, while providing support for plantar fasciitis.
- This innovative Orthopaedic insoles can breathe circulating air throughout the shoe, ventilating the foot at every step, and the highly flexible material makes it more suitable for an active lifestyle.
