Product description

Our polypropylene rope is especially treated to resist sun damaging effects.

Despite the fact that the exposure to water can weaken the strength of polypropylene, this effect is so slight that polypropylene is still commonly used for mooring lines & anchor lines.

Moreover, this rope is a great choice for any tie-down because of its zero loss of strength even when wet, low stretch, & sustenance. The all-around durability of the rope makes it useful for any job in any situation. The diamond braid is constructed from a polypropylene core surrounded by a braided soft polypropylene cover where each alternate loop is twisted in the opposite direction which results in a 100% rope with high strength and good shock absorption characteristics.

This torsion-balanced construction prevents heckling & maintains dimensional stability.

This braid is a high strength rope that has a smooth soft feel making for easy handling & eye splicing. These high-end specifications make it a top-notch product in the marketplace.
