Question: Could someone provide a link that proves these have been approved by the fda for emergency use? i am not finding it.

★★★★★ KN95

I've been using these masks, Throughout the pandemic. I like them and as I am a nurse I'm very confident of recommending them. They are comfortable and soft, wear as recommended. I use one per week on average and spray them with alcohol and allow it to dry each time I use them.

★★★★☆ Doesn't seem to be on the approved list

Reviewed in the United States on January 21, 2021

Color: Black | Verified Purchase

Google "Chengde technology and CDC KN95" the resulting pdf indicates that the filter material is appropriate and effective, but that no manufacturing certification has been supplied and the fit might be ineffective. If you want to take a chance and try the fit out for yourself and assume that the filter material is consistent (without the certification), then these are probably good masks. I specifically ordered them because I wanted ones on the CDC approved list and they weren't.

★★★★★ Nose piece molds very well - makes seal for small/medium face

Reviewed in the United States on December 7, 2020

Color: Black | Verified Purchase

Got my pack in the mail today and confirmed the manufacturer first (Chengde Technology Co. KN95, indeed listed in FDA's Appendix A (EUA authorized non-NIOSH approved respirator), which was on the back of the packaging, as well as on a package insert (see photos). I also confirmed the model was marked as GB2626 - 2019 on the packaging and on the masks.

Overall, I was impressed by the quality of the masks - they seem higher quality and are more comfortable than others I've bought.

However, most importantly, the masks made a good seal on my face with just the ear loops. Adding on an "ear protector" mask strap definitely made an adequate seal around my face, similar to the seal made with the Powecom FFP2 with the headband straps (without the ear loops).

There are dozens if not hundreds of holes in the mask, see photo. This allows things like the COVID-19 virus in.

★★★★☆ Misleading claims about FDA Authorization

Reviewed in the United States on December 20, 2020

Color: Black | Verified Purchase

This product falsely claims to have an FDA authorization; however, this mask is not listed on FDA's site under "Personal Protective Equipment EUAs". While there's an image of an acknowledgment letter from FDA/CDRH stating that this request is under review, this is not the same thing as actually being authorized for that use. For that reason I'm giving this mask 1 star because it's misleading to consumers and brings into question whether the mask is actually as effective as they claim or if it's just another fake that seems to be prevalent in the protection mask sector right now.

These mask are perfect becauae the other ones I was using sat directly on my lips and made me feel like I was suffocating. Although these ones give me a bird like look they make it so I feel like I can breath. They're also layers which offers extra protection.

★★★★☆ Pretty good buy despite a couple of things

Reviewed in the United States on November 27, 2020

Color: Black | Verified Purchase

I bought these masks as my wife and I headed out to San Diego during Thanksgiving week. I didn't want to chance using the thin blue masks for a long flight out to California and then back to the DC area. Comfort is about medium as the ear loops take their toll on your ears. I wish the seal was better as the mask itself will all of a sudden start leaking air from around your nose and cheeks. My wife's glasses were fogging up randomly even after adjusting the nose strip. I honestly did feel safer with the thickness of the mask. The size of the package was perfect for our trip. We had plenty to use on the plane ride there and back and while out and about. Other than the fact you need to relieve the pressure on your ears and adjust the nose strip to reseal the mask back to your face every 15-20 minutes or so, I'd say these masks are pretty good.

★★★★★ Great masks

Reviewed in the United States on November 11, 2020

Awesome masks, have been using them for a couple of weeks when I go out. I'm still quarantined and only go out when absolutely necessary, since I don't have an immune system due to my medical conditions, but these masks fit my face just fine, and I can breathe well. They come wrapped in packs of 5 in a resealable bag which is great. I can keep them in my car.
