Question: Does this connect to the Fitbit app?

Answer: Dear Stephanie , Fitbit has their own system so that our heart rate monitor could not connect with their app. We could connect with Wahoo , CatEye.... Tks for your support.

Vine Customer Review of Free Product (What's this?)

At $29.99 (the price I ordered this at) this is an excellent HR chest strap. At $24.99 (the price as I write this review) it's fantastic.

Easy to install the (included) 2032 battery. Easy to use; paired without issue to my Garmin Forerunner. Seems to be providing accurate data (if you're a Garmin Connect user this will make sense: I find that wrist HR generates a higher number of intensity minutes - meaning a higher, less accurate HR - than a chest strap). For someone like me (no longer a hard-workout runner or cyclist) it's not a big deal, but for those who want to stay on top of their metrics a chest strap is - I think - essential.

While I still like my Wahoo more I think that preference is more a matter of familiarity than function. So my sense at this point is that it's worth the prospective buyer giving it a try. For the price, why not?

5 (solid) stars.

P.S. Have liked it so much (as well as the other Dream Sport sensors) that I bought a second HRM strap.

Seems accurate enough when it is connected

Vine Customer Review of Free Product (What's this?)

I picked this up to use mainly with commercial exercise equipment and with my Garmin smartwatch. I've only been able to try this with my Garmin as I've not had access to commercial exercise equipment due to lack of travel during COVID.

The instructions are vague particularly around battery installation. Although it looks easy enough on paper because there's a water seal on the battery cover it doesn't come out very easily at all - I find I have to use a knife edge to pry the cover open even after unlocking it with a coin. I do like the fact that it uses a standard CR2032 coin cell since these are available practically everywhere and will last a long time.

Once the sensor has a battery and is properly fitted it can be paired. The instructions had a diagram as to sensor placement and orientation but didn't mention that the strap has a correct orientation on your body - if you get it backwards it doesn't work at all. For reference the second pickup goes on the left side of your chest. It also mentions moistening the pickups but doesn't really discuss how.

Peloton set up is a little funky.

Reviewed in the United States on June 22, 2021

Vine Customer Review of Free Product (What's this?)

Just want to warn fellow peloton users that the Bluetooth set up is a bit strange. Basically when you're adding the new device it acts like it didn't connect, and says there an issue with the "pin code". I seriously wasted so much time messing with it trying to figure out what was wrong that by the time I gave up I could only squeeze in a 10 minutes class before my kids got up from their nap. It wasn't until I went to Connect my Apple Watch to my bike that the device popped up as available to connect. It actually popped up twice, which was extra confusing. So I just picked one, and it works. So basically ignore the error you get when adding the device. Just pick a class, and see if it's available to connect.

The heart rate monitor seems accurate, performs just as good as my Apple Watch, but now I have a dedicated device that I don't have to worry about charging. I'm one of those people that has a hard time taking a class when my watch is dead. If I can't watch my heart rate, I find myself not pushing myself as hard.. Having a dedicated device that I can leave with my peloton, that always has a charge is a dream come true. It also stays connected. There's nothing more frustrating than when you're taking a class and
