Embody Your Essence Brand

Yesterday at 11:08 AM ·

The word "essence" was first used in ancient Greece to describe something that something special in someone, like the uniquely powerful teaching techniques that set Socrates' apart from every other teacher and philosophers, even to this day.

You have a unique essence. It's what makes you different from everyone else; what brings your personality to life. It's the fabric that creates your personal identity and fundamental traits. And it's what attracts others to you, ready t... See more

If someone is confused about what box to put you in even for an instant, you've done your job.

Standing out isn't some big mysterious strategic endeavor, and the easiest, most authentic, most magnetic way to do it is to embody your magnificent uniqueness.

You may be masking your true talents and skills by focusing on being a "role" instead of who you really are. People want to work with someone they can relate to, identify or trust!

When you remember that your true self is what connects with clients, not the title on your business card, then it all makes sense.

If you're finding that this hits home, then I'd love to invite you to join my round table. Click the link in my bio to sign up. 💙
