The screenshot shows a web browser displaying a Yahoo Finance news article. The article is dated February 10, 2022, and is 2 minutes long. The headline reads: "The wildly anticipated Lilly token, a cryptocurrency created to change the future of health and wealth, will launch on the open-source Ethereum blockchain platform, Uniswap, on February 11th, 2022." The text of the article states: "ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 10, 2022 /PRNewswire/ -- After months of meticulous work and mounting anticipation, Lilly Finance, LLC has seen its conscious crypto dream come true, launching on one of the most well-known Ethereum blockchains with now over 1.4 billion transactions." Below the text is the Lilly logo, which consists of a stylized 'L' made of overlapping colored shapes (purple, blue, pink) above the word "Lilly" in a large, bold, black font. Underneath the logo, it says "Lilly Finance" and "As the first youth-inspired, medically focused cryptocurrency, Lilly Finance is making history by creating an accessible financing vehicle with a charitable bent. Lilly utilizes the ascent". To the right of the article, there is a sidebar with several elements: a "Quote Lookup" search bar, a "TRENDING" section with five items (1. FAA expands use of independent review boards in certifying airplanes, 2. Putin Retaliates as Sanctions for Invasion Swell: Ukraine Update, 3. Yahoo Finance Premium investment idea of the day: Autodesk, 4. Meta exec details how hackers spread 'false narratives' about Russia, 5. Presidents of 8 EU states call for immediate talks on Ukrainian), and a "Help rid your phone of malicious apps" advertisement with a "Get it now" link. Above the trending section is an advertisement for the "Economics of Blockchain and Digital Assets" program, a 6-week online certificate program from Wharton Executive Education, with a "Blockchain Knowledge Program" button.
