The "security" questions are general questions that even an acquaintance wud know the answer to. There shud either be deeper questions or a custom option. At least it consistently requires a pin now BUT there is a lag in when it requests a pin after opening the app. If this is an app with images or important data this delay can make a huge difference.

It's great because I don't need locks for all of my apps. Only the ones I want privacy for my eyes only. I have a good lock on my phone but this is an extra insurance to feel your apps are secured in case someone does get in my phone, they will hit a brick wall with this app. I love it. 5 stars. Nothing bad about it at all

Works very well. I tried so many other app lockers from Google Play and this is by far the easiest to setup and use. The only thing I'd do away with is the need to re-enter the pin# upon leaving an app, I think it's a bit annoying. As a side, InShot makes awesome apps, I'm using several of them and they're all quality software. And no, I'm not paid to advertise them, I'm just making an honest observation.

The app is excellent and easy to use. I give it a solid 4. Just a few issues that I am facing is that the app just some times glitches and doesn't respond and after a few days the app automatically opens some of the apps like if I have locked my Facebook with password, then after a few days it just doesn't lock I mean it's just open every time you try opening it that's the issues I am constantly getting. Would also like to know if there is any issue from my side. Other than that all is good 👍👍
