Back to 'Bassike' – the designer duo at VAMFF UNITED STATES

by Leonie Dzialeck, Contributing Author | 17 September 2018
Comfy but luxurious, easy to care but fabulous – This is what the label's movement looks. Bassike (which pronounces like 'Basic') was founded by the designer duo Deborah Sams and Mary Lou Ryan 12 years ago. The high-end designs which are fabricated continuously in Australia distinguish the sustainability of the label not merely.

Dion Lee at VAMFF UNITED STATES

by Leonie Dzialeck, Contributing Author | 19 June 2018
Once awarded with the L'Oréal Melbourne Fashion Festival National Designer Award (and many more) it's not possible to imagine Lee without VAMFF on Runway 1. It's known as one of the Festival's long-awaited runways, presented by vogue.com.au and supported by L'Oréal Paris. Australian promising talent Dion Lee showing his ready-to-wear Fall 2018 collection at VAMFF on March 3 needs just a duality again that inspires every aspect of Lee's work. Combining modernity versus classic, draped versus smoothed and tailored versus soft lines.

Virgin Australia Holds Its First Ever High-Flying Fashion Show UNITED STATES

by Leonie Dzialeck, Contributing Author | 1 March 2018
Great to see Virgin Australia hold its first ever high-flying fashion show. Every passenger got a front row view in a very fitting celebration of Virgin Australia's fifth year as Principal Partner of the Virgin Australia Melbourne Fashion Festival. We set up Virgin Australia – then Virgin Blue – because we felt that passengers deserved something better than the bland and boring norm that airlines offered. It was the same with Virgin Atlantic – it came out of personal frustration from my own tedium while travelling, and I wanted to add a bit of fun to the skies.

Anok Yai opens for Prada – first Black since 1997 ITALY

by Leonie Dzialeck, Contributing Author | 28 February 2018
It's been a black moment in fashion history at Prada's Fall 2018 show during Milan Fashion Week when Anok Yai became the second woman of color ever to open a Prada show. Naomi Campbell was replaced since 1997 by a 19-year-old on prime time. Last Friday, (Holy, two decades had to pass!) Entirely beside herself, Anok took this exclusive happening worldwide on Instagram. To thank Miuccia Prada and the team for her dream come true, she wrote: "Can't believe I'm the first black woman to open for Prada since queen @iamnaomicampbell"

Chanel's Women Rule Rule the Runway UNITED STATES

by Fashion Elite, Staff Writer | 22 August 2017
When Women, ruled the runway! As if long legs and bold pops of color peeking out from sexy business skirts and professional work ensembles isn't enough of a "Women rule the world" sort of fashion statement, Chanel powerhouse designer Karl Lagerfeld decided to take his Spring couture collection show 100 steps further: In a final march down a Paris runway at Fashion Week in September, Lagerfeld's top models, including Gisele Bündchen, Georgia May Jagger and Joan Smalls chanted for their rights as women and held up signs that

Oscar de la Renta: a legend that will live forever UNITED STATES

by Fashion Elite, Staff Writer | 22 March 2017
Looking back, Oscar de la Renta, legendary fashion icon and master of evening gown design, has sadly died from complications with an eight-year battle with cancer. The renowned designer passed on Monday in his home in Kent, Conn., located near the border of New York. At 82, de la Renta had dedicated more than half of his life towards not only dressing, but also glamorizing the privileged class in his colorful, one-of-a-kind creations. De la Renta was diagnosed with cancer in 2006, but had announced that he was "totally clean" at a "Fashion Talks"
