Future Workplace Trends by MPath Coaching

Digital and Data

The proliferation of data and digital fuels the need for teams to adapt to change and embrace how technology will reshape work. The future of work includes advanced communication methods and more immersive experiences.

Skills Development

Advanced metacognition skills including decision-making, creative problem-solving and change management are important as technology advances at a rapid pace. Upskilling and reskilling the workforce for the future is vital.

Generational Changes

With Gen Y and Z expanding their footprint in the workplace, leaders need to understand how to motivate, engage and communicate across different generations and diverse work preferences.

Employee Experience

Starting with empathy, companies can disrupt and reimagine the employee experience. Diversity, inclusion, equity and belonging (DEIB), accessibility, wellness, and culture are key considerations.

Leadership (R)evolution

As the demands of leaders change and old leadership paradigms dissolve, leaders who embrace selfreflection, empathy, humility and courage can positively impact retention and engagement.

Collaboration & Work

Across a dynamic landscape of remote, hybrid and onsite teams, establishing new ways of working and collaborating can drive efficiency and results.

Prior Experience

Client Praise

Manisha is an inspirational coach and leader. Not only is she passionate about guiding, supporting and following up with her clients, she takes pride in her work and wants you to be successful. I had the pleasure working with Manisha last year and landed a great job as a result of her strategic and innovative coaching. I highly recommend Manisha if you're looking to make a career change, furthering a career, or just seeking an advisor/mentor.
