Not A Bad Ending

Aw, poor sleepy buddy. He stayed up all night waiting for the world to end for nothing.

Gosh, it almost breaks your heart, doesn't it? Just look at how cute our son is. He's got his little backpack packed and ready for bugging out and everything. He even went to sleep with his baseball bat nearby just in case someone tried to loot the house when the End came. Oh, he's going to be so upset when he finds out there weren't zombies, aliens, or even the slightest hint of fire and brimstone. Poor little guy.

No, let's not wake him. I don't want to disturb him just in case he's dreaming of trudging through a post-apocalyptic wasteland. Just let him cuddle with his friendly over-sized plush animal pillow while sleeping inside the super-soft coral fleece of his Zoobies Slumber Pets Sleeping Bag for the night.

Say, we've got a lot of empty cardboard boxes in the basement, don't we? And how are much aluminum foil would you say we've got handy? I was just thinking it'd be a shame for him to wake up tomorrow without something to look forward to. That'd be like a waking up to no presents on Christmas! And he's always going on and on about the inevitable robot uprising, right? Come on. Let's build our son his very own apocalypse.

Wait. Grab that baseball bat. He's a brave little kid, after all, and there's no reason any of us should have to go to the hospital for the End Of The World.
