Good for the face

I bought this at the end of April and I just got it (I had it sent to a friends house and they brought it to me) and I have been using for two days and I love how it works on my skin. A bit awkward when I want to do my nose area

Do not be overly aggressive - bruising!

I posted a review on how this was fabulous for cellulite - and it is - but I was on the phone, not paying attention and got very aggressive with rolling in my moisturizer on my thighs and woke up this morning with blue bruises up and down each thigh. Oh boy! I'm glad this didn't happen on my face because that would have been terrible! Lesson learned. Do not be overly aggressive with this or the little nubs will cause lots of bruises. Also I found I can not use this on my face in the AM. As another reviewer noted, it make pores giant from the blood flow and inflammation. I had to layer on the primer. SO... Still love this but must be gentle and no AM face use.

Cellulite... meet your match!!

I bought this as a face massager but then saw a review by a woman who uses this in the shower on her legs every day and got rid of her cellulite. What?! I have always been pretty slim with no cellulite issues... but 9-5 + 22 months of grad school... all leading up to a big exam next month... and I am the proud new owner of three spots of visible dimples on my thighs. This little puppy is going to do the trick. I rolled in the shower, then out of the shower with moisturizer on the roller for 5 minutes each leg last night. It feels lovely (ie: minorly uncomfortable) and the numbs get right into the tissue. M thighs were bright red after - which means good blood flow! I'll report back my results in a month!

It's okay

I was really hopeful I would like this. It's cute, lightweight and seems like a decent idea but the plastic is so hard and honestly, unless you have no acne, it's quite painful! I saw no benefit and probably won't use again.
