Judy Helfman
Examining Attorney

RESPONSE TO OFFICE ACTION

This responds to the Office Action issued January 16, 2019 by the United States Patent and Trademark Office.

REMARKS

The Examining Attorney initially refused to register Applicant's Mark ADRENALINE ("Applicant's Mark") because she contends that it so resembles the marks in Registration No. 5,524,691 owned by The Buffalo Cartridge Company Inc. and Registration No. 4,409,215 owned by Tyrolia Technology GmbH (together, the "Cited Registrations") that it is likely to cause confusion under Section 2(d) of the Trademark Act. Applicant respectfully disagrees because the respective goods of the Cited Registrations are not related to or overlapping with Applicant's goods.

ARGUMENT

Applicant applied to register the mark ADRENALINE for the following goods:

Class 13: Shooting accessories, namely, gun rests

Class 18: Hiking sticks

The Examining Attorney has cited as a bar to the registration of Applicant's application, the following marks:

Reg.No.	Mark	Owner	Class/Goods
5,524,691	ADRENALINE	The Buffalo Cartridge Company, Inc.	Class 13: Ammunition
4,409,215		Tyrolia Technology GmbH	Class 28: Ski bindings and structural parts thereof, snowboard bindings and structural parts thereof, ski brakes, ski poles, discs specially designed for ski poles, skis, snowboards

(together, the “Cited Marks”).

Applicant submits that its mark and the Cited Marks can coexist based on differences in the products sold under each ADRENALINE mark. When the goods in question are not related or marketed in such a way that they would be encountered by the same persons in situations that would create the incorrect assumption that they originate from the same source, then, even if the marks are identical, confusion is not likely. TMEP § 1207.01(i).

Although the mark ADRENALINE owned by The Buffalo Cartridge Company, Inc. and Applicant’s Mark are the same, ammunition is not so related to Applicant’s gun rests such that the marks would create the incorrect assumption that they originate from the same source. Applicant intends to use its ADRENALINE mark in connection with gun rests, which are products that aim to improve aim, steadiness, and comfort on the range. A rest is a support device that permits the operator to rest the firearm, which reduces operator fatigue and permits increased accuracy. A gun rest does not affect the functionality of a firearm i.e., a consumer would not need to purchase a gun rest in order to use the firearm. Ammunition, on the other hand, is the material fired from a firearm. Firearms require some form of ammunition to operate.

Accordingly, gun rests serve the operator of a firearm whereas ammunition serves the operation of the firearm.

The Examining Attorney contends that ammunition and gun rests are related because “evidence of third-party registrations from the USPTO database of trademarks supports a determination that these types of goods are commonly sold in connection with at least one source identifier by third parties, and are [therefore] related goods.” Office Action, p. 5. But the mere fact that the mark owners operate in the same broad industry does not establish that the goods are related. National Rural Electric Coop. Assoc. v. Suzlon Wind Energy Corp., 78 U.S.P.Q.2d 1881, 1885 (T.T.A.B. 2006) (holding that publications about the rural electrification industry and wind turbines were not related in such a way that the consumers would assume the goods and services originate from the same source simply because they both involved producing electricity). Moreover, third-party registrations that cover a number of different goods may have some probative value to the extent that they may serve to suggest that goods or services are of a type that may emanate from a single source, if the registrations are based on use in commerce. Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Packard Press, Inc., 62 USPQ2d 1001, 1004 (Fed. Cir. 2002) (evidence that “a single company sells the goods and services of both parties, if presented, is relevant to the relatedness analysis”). However, evidence of third-party registrations does not establish, or as the Examining Attorney contends, “support a determination that these types of goods are common sold in connection with at least one source identifier,” without other evidence to establish relatedness, such as actual use of the marks in the registrations. See generally In re Princeton Tectonics, Inc., 95 USPQ2d 1509, 1511 (TTAB 2010) (“while third-party registrations can play an important role in establishing that the types of goods at issue are related, examining attorneys must review the registrations carefully to ensure that each registration presented is probative and that the number of registrations is sufficient, along with other types of evidence, to establish that the types of goods at issue are related”). The Examining Attorney has not provided evidence that third parties actually sell both ammunition and gun rests under the same mark, and therefore the evidence submitted in support of the refusal against registration in Class 13 cannot support a finding that such products are related for a finding of likelihood of confusion.

With respect to the alleged relatedness between hiking sticks and ski poles, the Examining Attorney bases her conclusion on online retailer evidence purporting to show that third parties commonly sell both products (hiking sticks and ski poles) under the same mark. Respectfully, the cited web pages do not support that conclusion. The third-party evidence at most demonstrates that three third-party retailers sell walking poles, trekking poles, and skiing poles. Specifically, the evidence made of record includes:

- Printouts from LEKI USA, a manufacturer of skiing, trekking, and Nordic walking poles. The printouts show that LEKI USA manufactures all three products, but markets and sells each under a different mark. Each walking, trekking, and skiing pole is sold under a different brand name e.g., TRAVELLER CARBON (walking pole), CORKLITE DSS (trekking pole), and SPITFIRE S (skiing pole).
- Printouts from KOMPERDELL, a company that specializes in carbon ski and trekking poles and Nordic walking sticks. The printouts show that KOMPERDELL manufactures both products, but markets and sells each under a different mark. Each walking and skiing pole is sold under a different brand name e.g., SPIRIT VARIO PURPLE (walking pole) and PROVOLUTION WHITE (skiing pole).
- Printouts from BLACK DIAMOND, a manufacturer of equipment for climbing, skiing and mountain sports. The printouts show that BLACK DIAMOND manufactures both products, but markets and sells each under a different mark e.g., DISTANCE Z TREKKING POLES (trekking pole) and TRAVERSE WR 2 (ski poles)
- An article titled “snowshoe poles v. trekking poles.” Neither snowshoe poles nor trekking poles are at issue here and the Examining Attorney has not provided support to show that snowshoe poles and trekking poles are equivalent to ski poles and hiking sticks.

Accordingly, the evidence does not remotely establish that third parties are providing ski poles and hiking sticks under the same mark.

Likelihood of confusion is further obviated as demonstrated by the coexistence of multiple third party ADRENALINE marks for sporting goods products in International Class 28. It has long been held that where a mark is inherently weak, it is only entitled to a narrow scope of protection, and therefore, minor differences with other marks will obviate any likelihood of confusion. See e.g., In re Central Soya Co., Inc., 220 USPQ 914, 916 (T.T.A.B 1984) (stating weak designations are entitled to a narrow scope of protection than an entirely arbitrary or coined word); King Candy Co. v. Eunice King's Kitchen, 182 USPQ 108, 109-110 (stating that where marks are weak, consumers easily distinguish between minor differences in the marks).

Moreover, where the consuming public is exposed to numerous third party uses of similar marks for related goods and services, the reality is that consumers will look to differences in the marks and the goods or services themselves to distinguish their source and are not likely to be confused. See General Mills, Inc. v. Health Valley Foods, 24 USPQ 1270, 1278 (TTAB 1992). Evidence of third-party use of similar marks for similar goods and services is relevant to show that a mark is relatively weak and entitled to only a narrow scope of protection such that the public will look to other elements to distinguish the source of the goods and services. TMEP § 1207.01(d)(iii); Palm Bay Imports, Inc. v. Veuve Clicquot Ponsardin Maison Fondée en 1772, 73 USPQ2d 1689, 1693 (Fed. Cir. 2005).

In this case, the mark ADRENALINE, in relation to sporting goods like ski equipment, is entitled to relatively narrow scope of protection because of the number of third-party uses of marks comprised of the same word for similar products.

Here, at least seven different registrations for ADRENALINE all coexist (copies of the current status and title of the listed registrations are attached at Exhibit A). Furthermore, if the remainder of the goods in the  registration are presumably not related since they are not discussed in the action and there is no evidence supporting relatedness, it cannot be the case that skiing poles and hiking sticks are related merely because of the nature of the product itself i.e., a stick or pole. Each serves a very different purpose – one for skiing and the other for stability when hiking trails. Indeed, if Applicant’s mark can coexist with a registration for the mark ADRENALIN for “ski bindings and parts thereof,” it can easily coexist with the registration for .

Mark	Owner/Reg. No.	Class/Goods
ADRENALIN	Tyrolia Technology GmbH 4,440,710	Class 28: Ski bindings and parts thereof
ADRENALINE	Warrior Sports, Inc. 3,810,462	Class 28: Athletic protective pads for ribs; elbow guards for athletic use; lacrosse gloves; shoulder pads for athletic use
ADRENALINE	Luxilon Industries Nv. 3,861,023	Class 28: Strings for rackets
ADRENALINE	Eastman Outdoors, LLC 5,629,611	Class 28: Archery arrows; hunting equipment, namely, hunting arrows
ADRENALINE RUSH	Play 8 Ltd. Inc. 3,647,124	Class 28: Inflatable playground equipment, namely, climbing units, slides, and obstacle courses
ADRENALINE	Tapped Out, LLC	Class 28: Skateboards

	3,595,331
PURE ADRENALINE	Tapped Out, LLC 3,728,805	Class 18: All purpose carrying bags, tote bags

Accordingly, there is no likelihood of confusion because the goods of the Cited Marks are unrelated to Applicant's goods.

Respectfully submitted,
