SOUTHEAST ROUNDUP : Tennessee Beats Florida With a Burst, 45-3

OCT. 14, 1990
12 AM

FROM ASSOCIATED PRESS

The first half of Saturday night's game between No. 5 Tennessee and No. 9 Florida was the even struggle that most had predicted.

But the second half was all Tennessee.

Dale Carter returned the second-half kickoff 91 yards for a touchdown to start a 28-point third quarter that gave Tennessee a 45-3 victory in a Southeastern Conference showdown at Knoxville, Tenn.

Carter's return gave Tennessee a 14-3 lead and signaled an abrupt end to what had been a fierce defensive struggle between the Volunteers, 4-0-2 overall and 2-0-1 in the SEC, and the Gators (5-1, 3-1).

BATON ROUGE – A pair of LSU softball games against Southeastern Conference rival and No. 1-ranked Tennessee on April 28 and 29 have been picked up for broadcast by ESPN2, marking the second straight year the eighth-ranked Tigers and Lady Vols will battle it out on the national network.

Due to the acquisition of the games by ESPN2, the first game of the series on Saturday, originally scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. and televised by Cox Sports Television, has been moved to a 3 p.m. start with the second game of the doubleheader scheduled for a 5 p.m. first pitch.

The final game of the Tennessee series remains scheduled for a 1 p.m. start. The first and third games of the series will be televised on ESPN2 in Baton Rouge on cable channel 36. Last season, LSU lost to Tennessee, 0-4, on ESPN2, before coming back to defeat the Lady Vols, 4-0, on ESPNU.

Cox Sports Television has now dropped the first game of the Tennessee series from its broadcast schedule and instead picked up the mid-week SEC doubleheader against Kentucky on April 3, giving the Tigers six games televised on CST this season. LSU is a perfect 2-0 on Cox Sports already this year, knocking off McNeese State, 7-1, and No. 19 Florida, 2-1.

The Tigers will now have a total of nine regular season games televised this year. In addition to the two games already broadcast by Cox Sports Television, they will televise Saturday's first game against Alabama at 1 p.m., the Kentucky doubleheader on April 3 and a single game against Southeastern Louisiana on April 11. SEC-TV will televise the final game of the Alabama series this weekend on Sunday.

This marks the second straight year LSU has had nine regular season softball games televised. Last season, the Tigers saw one game broadcast by ESPNU, one broadcast by SEC-TV and five televised by Cox Sports Television.

Kellie Harper returns home to coach Tennessee

By Mechelle Voepel
espnW

Kellie Harper takes over a Tennessee women's basketball program that has been surrounded of late by bittersweet nostalgia, clear-eyed pragmatism and frustrated pessimism. But there's also a lot of hopeful optimism in Lady Vols nation. Harper will have to navigate all of that.

Kellie Harper led Tennessee to national championships as a player for Pat Summitt. Next, she hopes to restore the Lady Vols to prominence.

Harper, the Tennessee native and former Lady Vols player, "came home" on Wednesday, and for those in support of her replacing Holly Warlick, this is an especially happy day. For those who think Tennessee should have aimed higher -- getting a coach who already has had success at a Power 5 school -- this is a time of trepidation.

Was Harper, who spent the past six seasons at Missouri State, the right hire? Only time will tell. But there are good points to be made in support of Harper.

Some might say that with her coaching résumé, which includes four years at NC State following the legendary Kay Yow, Harper wouldn't have gotten this job if she weren't a former Tennessee player. And that's true. But that doesn't mean she isn't the right choice.

Women's basketball history matters at Tennessee -- probably more than it does at any school in the United States -- because the timeline of the Lady Vols' influence is so expansive. By the same token, the past can't overshadow the present or the future. If Harper does this right, all three can coexist.

"I can look right out this door and see a statue over there. That was not lost on me," Harper said Wednesday at a

Revisiting The Rivalry: The 1990 and 1991 Florida-Tennessee games

By mlmintampa | Sep 12, 2007, 5:52pm EDT

Every rivalry has a flash point; Ruth from Boston to New York, Chuck Bednarik hitting  Frank Gifford with a clothesline, Rocket Richard breaking Hal Laycoe's face with his stick. While in the history of sport, Red Sox-Yankees, Eagles-Giants, and Canadians-Bruins are more significant, they all began with an historic act that reverberates to this day. Just like Florida-Tennessee.

Prior to divisional play, UF and Tennessee played home-and-home series. Included in this were the 1990 and 1991 games. In Spurrier's first Tennessee game as head coach in 1990, the Gators were manhandled 45-3 in Knoxville. This was the only SEC blemish, as the Gators were 6-1 and won a mythical "First In The SEC" title.

Following that game rumors spread, which persist to this day, that Tennessee fans had chants referencing the Gainesville student murders. In fact, the idea of Tennessee fans doing this led some at the 1991 game to bring even more hatred. But, there is no documentation of this chant and everything is second hand from people at the 1991 game in Gainesville. So is it an urban myth? I asked the expert, former FTC commissioner and writer of EDSBS, Orson Swindle if this was true.

I've heard it, too, but have nothing specific to even come close to backing it up as hearsay. I think it's the Tennessee equivalent of Alabama's claim that Florida fans cheered when Tyronne Prothro's foot fell off in Tuscaloosa. It's delirious rumor, as far as I know.
ps. I emphasize: this is unsubstantiated crap.

Heading into the 1991 game, Florida was eligible for an SEC title and was 4-1 (lost to Syracuse). That, combined with the nature of the blowout the previous year, led to a highly anticipated in Gainesville. Since I was seven years old at the time, I'll let 1993 UF alum Alan W. explain.

Swole Squad: Tennessee's 10 most imposing players

Craig Fitzgerald stayed in Knoxville this offseason despite interest from multiple schools, including alma mater Maryland, meaning the Tennessee football program got to retain its strength and conditioning coach for a second season.

That was a huge deal for a program that has had too much turnover for far too long in that critical department.

Keeping Fitzgerald — a former NFL Strength and Conditioning Coach of the Year — and recruiting some bigger players from the high school and junior college ranks has allowed Tennessee to put a more physically imposing team on the field heading into its second preseason camp under head coach Jeremy Pruitt.

Here are the 10 most physically imposing Tennessee players on the field at the moment, according to a straw poll from the GoVols247 staff.

We're calling them the Swoll Squad. And we'll list them in alphabetical order.

Purdue, a 3-seed in the 2019 NCAA Tournament, is making its third straight Sweet 16 appearance and is seeking its first Final Four since 1980. Standing in its way on Thursday is 2-seed Tennessee, which held off a furious comeback from Iowa in the last round. The 13th-ranked Boilermakers (25-9) finished the regular season as co-champions of the Big Ten with Michigan State at 16-4, while the sixth-ranked Volunteers (31-5) tied Kentucky for second in the Southeastern Conference at 15-3. Tip-off from the KFC Yum! Center in Louisville is set for 7:29 p.m. ET, and the all-time series between the schools is tied at 2-2. The Volunteers are favored by 1.5 in the latest Purdue vs. Tennessee odds, while the over-under for total points scored is 147. Tennessee is -140 on the money line (risk $140 to win $100), while Purdue is +120 (risk $100 to win $120). Before making any Purdue vs. Tennessee picks of your own, see what the SportsLine Projection Model has to say.

This model, which simulates every game 10,000 times, has raked in the winnings for those following its picks. Over the past two years, the SportsLine Projection Model has returned over $4,000 to $100 players on its top-rated college basketball picks. Tennessee's 2019 schedule ranked easiest to toughest game

By STAFF - 6 hours agoShare1 Comments

The Tennessee football program has missed out on the postseason the past two years. It's also been 15 years since the proud Volunteers had a 10-win season and more than 20 years since UT claimed a Southeastern Conference championship.

Second-year coach Jeremy Pruitt is trying to change all that on Rocky Top. The former Florida State, Georgia and Alabama defensive coordinator is coming off a 5-7 maiden voyage in which his team dropped the final two games of the 2018 season.

Can Big Orange make a major step forward in 2019? Pruitt's program is projected to win just six games this year as he continues to rebuild – although Tennessee's 2019 signing class could provide immediate help in a few key spots and overachieve.

We take a look here at UT's 12-game schedule to see where some victories might be coming and rank the Volunteers' 12 toughest contests of the year.

With all due respect to Tennessee opponents Georgia State (a 2-10 team out of the Sun Belt Conference) in Week One and Chattanooga (an FCS squad that went 6-5 a year ago) in Week Three, here are UT's 10 toughest games of the 2019 season from easiest to hardest:
