This magnificent Ocala golf course offers all the beauty—and all the challenges—one could want. Ten holes border on the lakes of this former quarry. Elevation changes and shifting winds create an "interesting" pair of downhill par 3's—and we have one of the 10 longest holes in North America.

But no single hole is the reason this course will be nationally ranked. It's former Augusta National Senior Assistant Superintendent Asa High's use of satellite technology and the "tell" of the grass to perfectly condition the course. It's the lay of the quarried land. It's the pros. And it's the patient vision of Frank Stronach, the course designer, who permitted the time to get it right.
