Driver Frequently Asked Questions

Who can be a RELAY Driver?

Any active CDL holder can sign up to be a RELAY driver. However, before you can become available to carriers, you must pass a background check, meet driving record requirements, and complete a RELAY training program.

How do I earn money and how much can I make as a RELAY driver?

You earn money on an hourly basis with RELAY. The hourly rate range is between $22-$35 per hour. This range changes based on the demand from carriers. The total of how much you can make is in your control and depends on how often you want to work.

Am I required to accept a RELAY move request?

No, you are never required to accept a RELAY. You always have the option to say no thanks.

When do I get paid?

Once a job request is complete, both you and the carrier confirm the completed job and rate each other. RELAY drivers are paid on a weekly basis. RELAY also offers next day pay through our 3rd party partner PayActiv so you can access your pay as soon as the day after you earn it.

How do I get paid?

You can choose to transfer funds to your bank account, payroll card, reloadable debit card, PayActiv Visa card or even access it as cash by walking into any Walmart 24/7/365.

What if I need a ride to get to the truck?

RELAY provides FREE ride service to you to and from the truck so you don't have to worry about it. Simply Request a Ride directly from the app after you've accepted a RELAY move.

Will I receive a 1099 or W2 for work done with RELAY?

For your benefit, RELAY does not allow 1099 contractors as we believe drivers should be properly classified. All drivers are employed as W2.
