David Conwill
Back to the '30s

I'm fascinated by the way people personalize their cars. An automobile that looks exactly as it did when it sat in a showroom is cool and tells a certain story.

A vehicle that the owner has tailored to express himself or herself tells a different story. ...more>>

The De Soto Adventurer convertible was a bargain-priced Chrysler 300 beater

Photography by Jeff Koch Poor De Soto. The division was designed to be the Oldsmobile competitor in Chrysler Corporation's five-part GM division equivalency program (where Plymouth = Chevy, Dodge = Pontiac, De Soto = Oldsmobile, Chrysler = Buick, and Impe......more>>

Pat Foster
Before buying Jeep, AMC considered Ramblers panel trucks

Her interest and handling are... Talk about missing the boat: in the early 1960s, American Motors had at least three chances to add a line of trucks to its product offerings. The move would have greatly strengthened its dealer network while providing a significant increase in corporate s......more>>
