About Us

Founded in 1981 with the introduction of unique polyacrylamide technologies, Exacto has since earned a reputation for advancing the science of adjuvants and developing innovative technologies that improve the economics of irrigation and pesticide applications. With an eye on sustainable use of our most valuable resources, we focus on engineering solutions designed to optimize the conditions in which chemicals, water and soils come together to create bountiful croplands and vibrant landscapes.

Our experienced team of scientists, technical staff and sales professionals work in harmony with our research and distribution partners to gain a fundamental understanding of the dynamic challenges faced in the markets we serve. With this focus we are able to develop customized product solutions and illustrate their complex value to key influencers throughout the supply chain. By educating dealers, applicators and growers, they are empowered to make the informed decisions needed to ensure the maximum efficacy of every chemical application.
