Study suggests that regular attendance may help you live longer. Study says...
REPORT BY JENNIFER HARRIS, MPE

For I have seen that God can see those for my good...
 I do the same with some of the many other things about my life that I want to change.
 My baby's disabilities...
 My personal abandonment...
 The natural circumstances of my life...
 The happenings of the past...
 The persons with whom I live...
 The whole world as it is...
 Old age, sickness, death...
 I speak to them with love and the consciousness that they somehow fit...

like violence cannot lead to lasting change... only love and understanding can.

When I try to change what I dislike to me by fighting it I merely push it underground. I accept it. It will surface and reappear. What I resist will undoubtedly persist. I consider the example of Jesus, who sets himself the task of moving mountains and battles with evaporating them. Not even in his anger he is trying—he combines a team stance for change with an acceptance of reality as it is.
