MOUSE

The mouse is very light and handy, but it feels good in the hand and does not feel hollow. Regardless of the type of grip, the mouse's hand is in a balanced state, there is no "heavy" problem here. Clicking around feels good. The resistance is significantly greater than G403, but less than Huano. The side button is the best button I have ever used - moderate resistance and tactile feel, no obvious pre-travel etc. I appreciate that the middle click is one of the easiest buttons to press. Some mice have very rigid middle clicks, so they are hardly used. Some people say that the roller feels cheap, and I am different on this point. There is no rattling or shaking, it feels great to the touch, and it is extremely light-resistant - which means it is suitable for both gaming and browsing. One of my favorite aspects of the mouse compared to the G403 is the tiny grooves on both sides of the scroll wheel. I tend to keep my fingers close to the scroll wheel, and certain feelings about that ledge are correct. The plastic texture on the mouse is very good, it gives you the feel of a mouse, but it does not evoke the "premium" feeling like some Corsair products. As you might expect, the sensor is excellent, I just hope it is located further away.
