Mongrels/Hounds

Marshall BioResources provides a variety of mixed breed mongrels and hounds. All of our dogs are born and raised at our Class A breeding facility, and are purpose-bred for biomedical research. Our mongrels and hounds have contributed significantly to the development of new veterinary medicines and vaccines, often marketed for pets. These dogs have also been valuable for understanding human and canine cardiovascular disease and skeletal development. In addition, our mongrels and hounds have played an integral role in the development of new medical devices and surgical procedures, such as heart stents and artificial joints.

Please contact us for pricing or for more information about availability of mongrels and hounds in your region.
